Section 1 - How To Know If An Idea Is Good, Bad Or AWESOME!

I'm going to give you a technique today which you can use to evaluate your ideas and opportunities. It is something that you have naturally with a success mindset, but if you do not yet have your natural one back fully then this will help bridge the gap. So whatever the opportunity is...Whether it is about, business, an element of business, a new job, a new direction in life... Basically whatever...

This is the litmus test which you can use to not waste years of your life on mediocrity caused by taking up and running with an idea, or opportunity which does not create your full potential in life.

Many of us spend years in either a business we did because we could, not because we should. Or in a job we took because we thought it would help and it has ended up being a dead weight around our necks. Well if you master this technique then you will literally make...

This works like a charm and you will know for certain if an idea or an opportunity is the one you should be taking. I do not choose to use the word certain without taking care... Learn this technique and you will have the element of a successful person's mindset, which knows for certain that they are making the right moves.

All the right moves

When you get in touch with your natural success mentality, ideas and opportunities come so fast and in such great volume that I describe it myself as being plagued by opportunity.

While you are transitioning from your old way of thinking back to your natural mindset, you may right now just have the odd idea or opportunity come up. But once you've cleared your mind, discovered how you want to really live your life and basically got into your zone. Then you will find the ideas and opportunities just flow like water. In fact they'll flow in such volume and so fast that you'll end up wondering where they were hiding for so long.

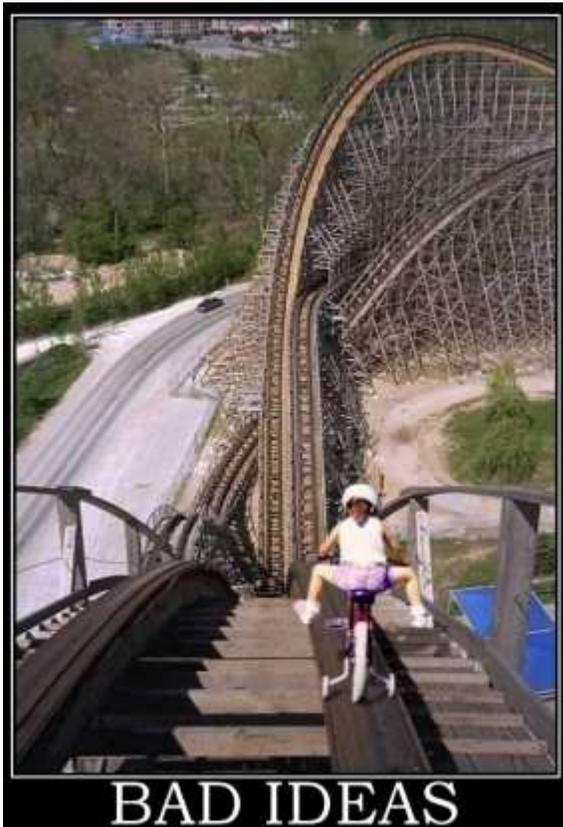

But right now I'm going to give you a technique which, when I shared it with a friend yesterday, said to me, 'This is inspired, this is powerful stuff', and he suggested that I should share it with you.

I've mentioned it before in my books, but never gone very deep into the understanding of the technique or provided a step-by-step approach to have it work. When you do this and apply it then you'll soon see it is how you used to think when you had a success mindset. With one exception of now you can use it on purpose to suit your life's planning to take it to the next level and way beyond.

After you've applied this method a few times, it will become just something that you do and you'll probably wonder how you could've done things before... But then that's the value and the price of ignorance... It really can be bliss :-)

The Good, The Bad & The Frickin Awesome!

The problem with ideas and opportunities is sorting out which are the good, which are the bad, and which are the awesome. There are also of course loads of levels in between, and one of the biggest reasons for people living unfulfilled lives is that they go with ideas and opportunities which fit into the nearly good category.

...Very few have truly great inspired ideas.

If you doubt this, then just remember how few people get to become the success they dreamed of. So you may just want to employ this technique if you are serious about getting the life you desire.

Now the nearly good category is just average. And the problem with this category is that when you have an idea that fits into it, from your perspective (i.e. where you are currently standing in life) this idea 'looks like an awesome idea.' But if you were looking back with hindsight then this idea would look only reasonable at best... Sometimes, and in fact quite often, it even looks bad.

Section 2 - How Nearly All Businesses Get Off On The Wrong Foot

Let me give you a real example of an awesome idea that was actually only reasonable in hindsight.

When I was a window fitter, working my nads off in the freezing cold of winter on a dreary wet day... The thought of owning my own window fitting firm and having dozens of people work for me, so that I didn't have to, was a 'frickin awesome' idea!

Side note- Looking back, this part makes me laugh out loud – "...having dozens of people work for me so that I didn't have to" – naivety beyond belief!

Anyway, the perspective from where I was, was that my current position was rubbish and the new position of being the owner was great...

This is how the vast majority of businesses start, which quite frankly should never have started in the first place. There are a few key reasons why at least 95% of businesses fail and one of the biggest, if not the very biggest, is that the business person should never have started the damn thing in the first place... They did it because they could, not because they should.

~ They started it, as I did simply because they could and it looked better than the place they were currently standing in.~

This is all about perspective!

However, this is a daft way of doing things. If I had taken the time out to see my life in reverse and see me even as a successful business owner in the home improvement industry then would I have wanted to do it...?

No! Some people would, but I wanted a lot more from my life than giving £110 of value for £100. That to me is too marginal for extraordinary success, but that's for another time.

Anyway, the point is that if I had used the technique below with my current mind state then there is no way I would've gone into that business. Simply because it didn't fit in with my life plan.

Your life plan being the one you defined for yourself in the design process in Using A Bug Free Mind, or the one you have yet to define.

Frankly, no big decisions should be made until you have completed this planning stage, as currently 'you don't know what you want!' You need to find that before considering if an idea or an opportunity fits in with what you want.

Side note:- If you have not read or watched what I have covered about the biggest problem in the world being that people don't know what they want. Then watching the videos I share for free at the bottom of this report will be worthy of your time. You have to join my mailing list to receive them, but you can opt out at anytime as I only want you on the list if I can help you, not harm you.

Success is all about just knowing what you want... and finding an idea, an opportunity which fits in with what you want!

If you don't believe me then consider this... If you don't know what you want, then how do you know if this idea will take you in the right direction?

It is only when you know what you want that you will know for sure that it will!

Until that time, you will be forever forced to rush in life because you have to rush back to where you are now... Because guess what...? Once again you went in a direction which didn't take you where you wanted to ACTUALLY go...

You rush, get stressed, get confused, get overwhelmed... all because you don't know what you want... So you are still trying to figure that out whilst you are already on the journey...

Have you ever tried going on a journey to somewhere, when you didn't know where it was?

Of course not, that would be insane right?

Let's say you're in New York and you start a journey to say Italy, but you didn't know you wanted to go to Italy, so instead you head off to Australia... What could be more insane than going on a journey like that?

Not a lot right, and of course we would never do it as it is obviously insane...

The good thing about doing that sort of insanity is you'd figure it out within a couple of months... But hang on, you're currently doing it with your life... So you're not wasting much there then are you???

Only your one entire life!

Forget whether we come back or not... I'm dealing with this life, I'll leave others to deal with stuff in the future, I'm only interested in now... My interest lies in you getting the maximum out of this one life!

So currently in your life, you and virtually every other single person on the face of the planet are taking part in a 100 yard dash with no sense of direction...

That's your life we are talking about... However, you'll say things like, 'Well I'm too busy working to figure out where I've got to go...' You don't actually use those words, but that's what you are saying whilst you remain unconscious...

Just because everyone is doing it, it does not make it any more sane...

If you do not know what you want, then you are living your life with NO SENSE OF DIRECTION... Which means you will end up unfulfilled... This really isn't rocket science is it? Any 7 year old can understand this and see how mad it would be to live any other way...

But not an intellectually clever person like you...

Do you want to know what the real insanity is?

Your ego has actually got you convinced that you do actually know what you want... But you don't... And it is really difficult to fix this problem because you don't know you have a problem... In fact you are sure you do not have a problem!

Nice illusion, what a cunning trick that our egos can play!

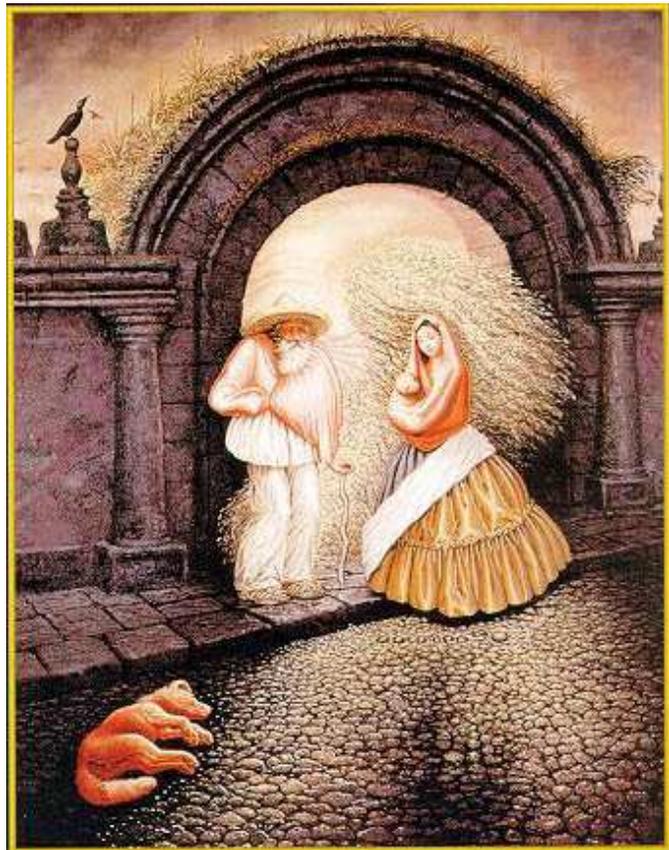

If you don't know what you want then I'm afraid you are destined to live an unfulfilled life...

I can sugar coat that, but it has more effect if I just explain in plain English why you will never become a success until you figure that bit out.

If you have become present enough to see your own insanity here in not knowing then maybe you may decide that now is the right time to take a bit of time out and create a plan for your life...

Unthinkable I know to consider planning your journey through life... I trust you realise I'm laughing at you now as I write this, well I have to write something to wake you from your life time of sleep...

If you saw people going the wrong way and living with uncertainty, but without knowing the truth that they were just living by accident, then after trying to offer help for years... Wouldn't you get to the stage of just laughing at the situation too?

If you are ready and you realise that it is time for you to wake up, then you are ready to go on the A Bug Free Mind process to clear your mind up and discover all you want in your life. But that's only if you are ready, I realise that you probably are not...

So back to the technique...

“Success is all about just knowing what you want...

And finding an idea, an opportunity which fits in with what you want!”

Your direction has to be established before moving forward. This is the self-evident, undeniable truth of ANY journey... So why is it you know this about journeys, but do not do it with your life?

I take it you do know that your life is a journey - Well do you? As you and virtually the rest of the entire world certainly appear to not know this!

But for the purposes of this technique, I'm going to assume you have at least started on figuring out what the heck you want out of life. If you haven't then read this article and use it as inspiration to figure out what you actually want from life.

Ask yourself this... When you have ‘what you want to get from life’ in place, then first off you know... whether an idea will fit into your life's plan, or whether or not you require a different idea...

This is not rocket science, this is merely a workman style approach to success... Successful people know this instinctively, because it is natural to them... You will re-acquire this skill too with practise.

Section 3 - The First Level Of 'Knowing Something' Is A Paradox, As It Is Destructive

Your very first step to every idea is... 'Will this help me achieve what I want from my life or not?' But the problem is you knowing that's the first step won't help you.

WARNING!

NO PARADOXES ALLOWED!

Why?

Because unless you get past the intellectual knowing of this and get to the 100 times deeper level of understanding it, then your knowing it means f*** all and is absolutely worthless to you.

In fact, your knowing it but not absorbing it so that you understand it, is actually destructive to your life... As the very high likelihood is that you are only on the intellectual level of knowing, or what I know as the very weakest level there is!

Just because you can talk about a subject does not mean you know it. We all know what we've got to do to lose weight - Eat less, eat the right stuff and exercise! Knowing intellectually is worse than useless, it is destructive.

Side note:- I was once at lunch with two business partners and my business mentor. We were eating in one of our favourite restaurants and had just ordered a really unhealthy meal. Before getting the starter we were all discussing, health and nutrition. If it was a radio show, then the listener would've considered us all experts on the subject.

However, Pete stopped us and said, has anyone noticed that there are four seriously overweight guys talking about their expertise in health and nutrition?

We all knew the subject intellectually and because we did, our minds told us that we 'knew' the subject and therefore did not need to consider it anymore. So we self-sabotaged ourselves because of the paradox of knowing.

You will have done this and be doing this in multiple areas of your life. Getting over this particular hurdle is where wisdom begins as you realise how little you actually know.

This is one of the most insidious little tricks that our egos trick us with to keep us trapped in lives of quiet desperation.

Another example (if you need one)... You can read the three best books on a subject and write your own book on the subject, but this does not mean you know the subject... If in doubt about what I mean here then just take a look at all of the abundant misinformation on health and nutrition there is... 99% bollocks, 1% good, 0.001% awesome!

And in your life, you could easily name an event which happened yesterday which you knew hurt your progress instead of helping it... Simply because at the time you decided to talk yourself out of doing the right thing.

This is intellectually knowing what the right thing is... And it is totally useless! And it is destructive! Knowing what to do will not get you the life you desire... That's nasty! Because you've been brought up to 'believe' that it will...

This deserves thought, as you currently think all you need to do is know how something works and then you know it... No, you just intellectually know it. The word 'know' has a very powerful good side which we all use without realising as I cover in my books.

However, the word know also has an equally destructive bad side... which is literally destroying the lives of billions of people without them knowing it.

“To think you know when you do not know means you will not fix the fact that you don't know...”

Which of course leaves you stuck and doomed to repeat the same mistakes again. But guess what?... Part of you knows you don't know. Part of you which is unnatural knows that you don't know... But that part of you keeps that knowledge from you as a control technique to keep you stuck... The part is your ego of course...

If you are overweight and you know what you need to do to lose weight, but have not done it... Then you knew you didn't know it, didn't you?

You just didn't want to admit it to yourself... Because to shine a light on it means work – work you view as painful... And your ego keeps you off of that subject and therefore trapped because the last thing it wants is you progressing...

Moving to the next stage of knowing, which is 100 times deeper, i.e. having absorbed the knowing instead... You are just doing, you don't feel the need to say you know that subject. You only feel the need to say you know something when it's an intellectual know.

If you catch yourself saying, “I know that!” then the chances are you only intellectually know it. And in fact, you do not know it... As if you knew it, you would be doing it... This is powerful life transforming stuff if you can apply it.

For example, I don't ever feel the need to say I'm an expert on mindset... Why? Because it's bleeding obvious, that's why... This is the absorb level of know. You will have plenty of examples of this level of absorbed knowing too... Little things like you know you can go to the shops... You know you can drive a car... You know you can ride a bike... Because they are all at the absorbed level of knowing.

Section 4 - Instantly Removing The Mediocre Ideas

So now I'll assume that you are at the point where you have an idea which fits into your life plan. This idea will help you achieve your goals. You can now clarify this idea as a good idea because it fits your ideas and it could help you on your journey. But we are not interested with good ideas, because once you've cleared your mind then you should have an abundance of those coming in...

Live On Purpose, Not By Accident

So by knowing and having designed your life plan, you now instantly know if an idea is only ok or nearly good and you can dismiss them without much thought. This is how much thought disposing of those ideas will take when you know your life plan. You currently ponder on far too many useless ideas and are paralysed and don't act because you don't know if an idea is good or not, let alone if it is awesome...

You don't know, simply because you don't know if the idea will take you where you want to go... Why? Because you don't know where you want to go... Are you beginning to see any patterns here in your thinking which are bringing about your current life situation?

How much thought would you need give it... to stop hitting yourself with a hammer...zero... That's how much thought you'll soon need to give to ok ideas, as they will be instantly dismissed as they do not fit in with your life plan.

So now what we need is the method of evaluating the idea to see if it's awesome. Here's what I wrote in an email yesterday after I commented on a new idea we were running for one of our sales funnels.

"As for will the site be right. I have a method which I rely wholeheartedly on, and it is... Let the idea go and if it comes back to you then look again. If it comes back again then it's probably good... This bloody idea won't stop coming back to me, I've considered it more than any other idea I've considered since starting to develop the whole sales concept... So there is 100% no doubt that this is a great idea."

I have used this concept for years now and it never fails.

I write down techniques and ideas and I have an efficient storage method for them and an efficient recovery method. However, the good ideas and particularly the awesome ideas never need to be written down, as they won't go away! You may however, first need a little looking at the idea to recognise the power of it. Basically the idea I mention above is, 'we should model our sales funnel on another successful website.'

Side note:- This in itself is a great technique for creating success, it's known as "not re-inventing the wheel." However, most people who are yet to become successful (and probably never will) do not realise that it is far easier to get where they wish to go by simply adding round wheels instead of some new pioneering shape!

I spent about 5 minutes considering the idea when my friendly neighbourhood copywriter first suggested it, and considered that it was a good idea. However, the work involved in copying it when the idea came up roughly 8 months ago was nothing short of monumental.

And we also needed loads of content both written and video content which we didn't have. So I thought by putting this down, then automatically with what I am doing there would be more content created in the interim period... So I employed the law of least effort.

The timing for the idea was completely wrong. So I duly made note of the idea and left it in my reservoir of ideas, simply knowing I could find it again if I wished. But if it was good then I knew it would come back to me.

Within a month the idea was bubbling up in my subconscious connection one morning. So I came down and looked at it again. I knew the idea was very good at this stage, but I sent it away again and got on with my work. Every month and then every week this idea would come back to me.

I was working on various tasks but now this idea was forming the basis for everything. I knew that this idea was the overall plan and what I'd done already were in fact just evolutions to get me to realise that this was actually the correct plan. So I knew the idea was already very good, but nowhere near awesome yet.

Again, I shooed it away as we weren't ready... The damn thing came back to me every single week, whether I was fully engulfed in building a model or if I was writing, or at seminars... it just kept coming back! Sometimes even daily!

Then finally last week I got to the point when I didn't want to do any work on what I was doing... I was about to go and connect with a lot of people but for some reason 'it didn't feel right...'

This is about synergy, which I bring your attention to in the books. Always keeping some of your mind focused on how you feel inside about what you are doing. And this is of course about using the law of least effort... As doing work when it feels right and not doing it when it feels bad means you are free-wheeling downhill, instead of pedaling up it.

As my readers know, I always go with how I feel even if it doesn't make business sense to do so. I wanted to work, but just not on that project. There were a few techy things still to be done so I felt I was jumping the gun a little anyway.

So instead I looked at what I could do, that would give me some inspiration. This site idea came rushing to the front saying, 'Have another look at me, come on look at me!' The best way I can describe the feeling is that a 'frickin' awesome idea' feels like a child seeking a parents attention.

Section 5 - Playing With An Idea Or Opportunity Is Nurturing It

So I got the idea out to play and looked at it again. My conscious mind instantly saw all of the work involved in making it work and how many months of behind the scenes work would be necessary before it would produce £0.01p of income.

Conclusion, be aware that your conscious mind will always tell you what's wrong with doing something. So be wary of listening to that voice only. Your intuition (your subconscious) will inspire you, and your conscious will usually stop you... This is all part of the programming we all receive... Being aware of it is the first step to being able to prevent it. A successful person is one who regains the connection with their intuition and learns to mainly ignore their conscious mind.

However, my playful mind, the one which I currently had time for, wanted to play with the idea and wanted to play with some new techy skills I'd been nurturing. So my conscious mind basically had no more reasons to tell me to stop, in other words I'd run it out of options.

So as I wanted to enjoy myself I went with it... 4 days later, only working on it when I wanted to and stopping to play games and all sorts of other things. I had designed the site and built it from a graphics point of view, and created the 7 quite complex template pages.

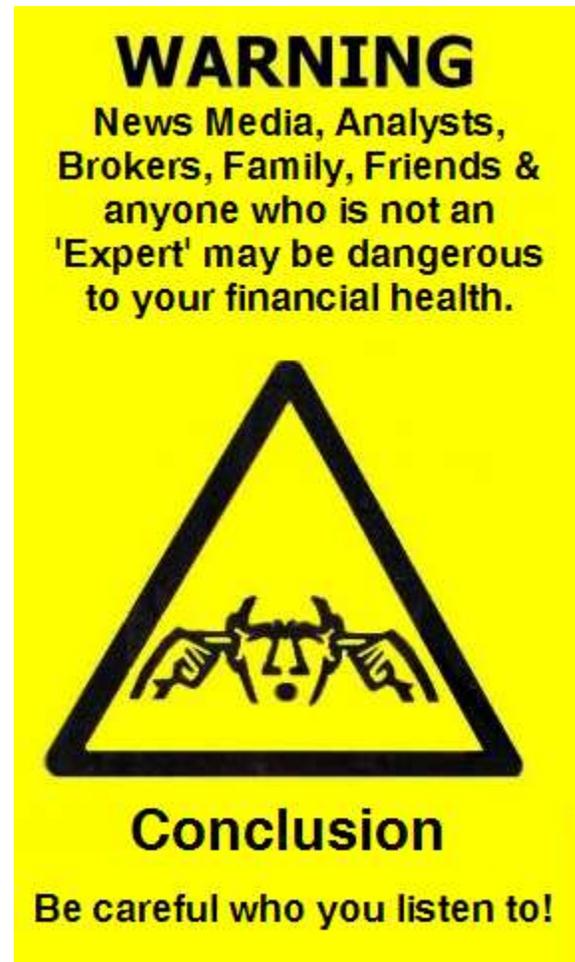

I'd created the site plan, come up with the reason why, created some of the copy. Written out a timeline (project plan) for getting the site live and defined who needed to do what parts and when to bring it all together. And I've even given the first instruction to have part of the site built. I broke the back of the project over 4 days of fun work.

...Because I was freewheeling downhill instead of pedaling up it. – Life is so much more enjoyable if you freewheel with it downhill, than pedal uphill against it.

I was able to do all of this because the idea was awesome and it fitted with part of my overall life plan.... As in it helped me with where I wanted to go, it was also right for me on the timing at that point to begin... No pressure, no hassle, just slow and continuous movement in the direction which will produce the results.

A Bug Free Mind – Special Report – Into, “Are You About To Make The BIGGEST Mistake Of Your Life?”

I could do all of this because as the idea kept coming back I nurtured it a little each time and then waited for the right time to just do something about it. This is synergy and going with the flow, it is using the law of least effort to its most potent effect – this is just part of your natural success mindset.

Because the idea wouldn't go away, the idea came back to me when I was in the perfect place to go and explore it further.

I have had dozens of almost awesome ideas fall at that stage, when I have done the few days of work on them. And whilst doing it I have discovered that the idea didn't quite fit my life plan, or the timing still wasn't right, so the good idea may be only a maybe... And I am prepared to accept that when I embarked on the start of the work.

I didn't think, 'Hey, I've got 4 days work here!' Instead I thought, 'I want to play with this!'

Work = effort, play = fun.

I had no intention that this idea had to happen, I had no thought about it happening other than a very slight thought of, 'if this is right then I'll do it...' But all the time I was just playing and this freed my mind of any need to produce...

Section 6 - The Acid Test Of A 'Frickin' Awesome Idea

Here's the response I got when I asked Jason my copywriter for some input...

"Bloody heck, you've been busy! :) Okay what you've got there looks fantastic. Obviously there's still lots of changes to be made. Overall though mate, it's a brilliant job."

This was the final piece of the 'awesome puzzle', someone else who is an expert and is in tune with what you are doing, thinking what you have created is brilliant.

If he'd come back with, 'Yeah this is ok, but it's not right', then maybe the idea wouldn't have been awesome. Though I was not waiting with baited breath to hear what he said... in other words I was not 'needing' his approval. I just did it all in a very 'workman' type of approach. I was balanced and neither high or low. I just was enjoying nurturing the fledgling idea... That's all!

So the technique to find if an idea is good, bad or frickin awesome is:-

1. An idea or an opportunity comes along – Does it fit in with your life plan – yes, no or maybe? Yes & maybe then write it down where you store all of your notes and ideas. No then forget it completely. If it keeps coming back then it's probably a maybe, so write it down. Though the chances of it ever being a yes are minute.
2. Wait and see if it comes back. If it doesn't then this is the law of least effort at work, you have given your subconscious mind this concept step and it hasn't given it back to you... So you can let it go... You may read it later on (I re-read my ideas and opportunities notes 3 – 4 times a year) and maybe the timing was just wrong... So this reminder will help if it's meant to – synergy remember – not forcing things works best.
3. If you've sent it away multiple times and it keeps coming back, then give it another hour or so of thought. Maybe you've thought about it as you woke up. Well why not go and research it for an hour as your subconscious gave it to you so maybe go and look at it. Then send it away again, simply by getting on with your other work, or just living.
4. When the damn thing won't stop coming back then wait until you have time for you to play with the idea a little. And just see what happens when you do. Do this without need, but do it with the expectation that if this is what I am meant to do then I will end up doing it. But right now, I am just playing and taking a look – i.e. no pressure at all in any way! This is the law of least effort...
5. See what happens. Who knows what will happen next, but if the idea flourishes a little then go to an expert who is aligned with your thoughts and intentions. This is not the usual muppet you go to as your unsuccessful self! (Don't underestimate the importance of that little bit). But an expert if possible, and ask them to look at something on it for you. You are not really asking for their opinion as this may give them too much freedom... Remember the idea at this stage is still embryonic and can be killed off with a harsh word. Then when the expert (who must be an expert... have I made that bit clear enough) – someone who is neither positive nor negative, just balanced says what they say. Then you will be at the point of knowing whether or not you are onto a winner. Or onto an uphill struggle, or if the idea just needs to go away again for a while. Now I've made many uphill struggles work, but the BIG winners are always easy, fun and rewarding.

Now I do this stuff on auto-pilot as does every successful person. However, whilst you are getting back in full contact with your natural success mindset, then this method will prevent you going into businesses and relationships when you do so just because you can, not because you should.

So this sorts out whether you should or not for any idea or opportunity...

Section 7 – When To Work & When To Play

Also, you know I said that I didn't feel right about not wanting to work on what I was currently doing, but how it made good business sense to do it instead of going to play... Well as I went to finish on Friday (2 days after starting to play with the idea) I saw an email had come in from a very influential and well known friend in the world of internet marketing.

Previously he had given me his ok to contact directly his entire list of affiliate partners, much more than I had asked for. I just asked him to mention it to a few of them. What he gave me was direct contact details of some of the biggest names in our business and this would significantly aid my exposure. I had done a sample email to mail to his contacts a couple of weeks before but hadn't heard back from him to get his ok on it before mailing.

I don't bother chasing anything as I always feel if some things are meant to work then they will.

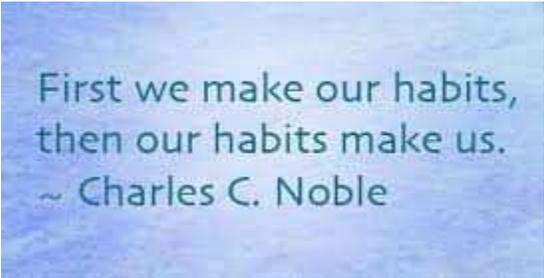

Well his response came back last Friday, and while I was pretty sure he would respond favourably and I expected as much, I am always open to a greater manifestation... And I am quite often surprised to see how it falls my way.

You see, previously I had helped him with a difficult situation he had in his personal life and given him some mindset guidance regarding a current business issue. I did this freely without any expectation of getting anything back. It was all just going to give instead of thinking about going to get.

Well here's what happened:-

Part of his reply: - *"I am not worried about the two tier payment as the time we spent talking was much more valuable to me. Look forward to talking with you again very soon and thanks for all your help. I didn't panic or get over stressed with the ***big personal problem*** and just calmly accepted it, worked on it and carried on as if nothing has really happened!"*

In other words, because I helped him the law of reciprocation meant he now wanted to help me, and so gave away a potential considerable sum in commissions just as a way of showing how grateful he was. I didn't ask nor did I expect him to do anything of the sort, he just did... This is an abundance mindset and is present in the majority of successful people.

First we make our habits,
then our habits make us.
~ Charles C. Noble

Going to give, not to get, being in synergy with your feelings and basically living this, not knowing it, means you do not become successful, you are successful.

You cannot have what you do not already have.
You must be a successful person before you become one. Think and act successfully and you will create success without pedaling uphill.

Thanks to this method I will now make more money, I will have an easier time of it and I will look forward to when I will get the opportunity to go to give with him again.

We all have this gift of being synergistic with everything. However, if life isn't currently going to plan then you may just need to tune back in to yours – and that is the system I define in A Bug Free Mind.

Once you start to practise with this step-by-step technique you will soon start to 'know' it works for you.

Using this will mean you do not go into opportunities because you can... It took me years of going into the wrong opportunities because I could. To finally work out that I should first consider if I should or not...

You get to that level once you figure out what it is that you want. And if you are ready for the time in life when you are fed up living without direction, then it may be finally time for you to put your mind through my bug free process. So that you can decide what you desire and know that you will certainly get it.

There is no rush though, when you begin to realise how little you know about what you thought you knew... that will be the right time to begin the process.

Then you will have the full roadmap to clearing out every single bad thought. I designed them for you, to get your life back on the track you once desired for yourself. I designed them to free you from fear, worry, stress, anxiety, overwhelm... all of which are ailments that do not exist in a young child's mind.

The step-by-step process will ensure you always take the most awesome opportunities and avoid the mediocre ones... This will free you from wasting years of your life... 'IF' you allow it to!

To your success,

Andy
